Ski Club Meets Next Thursday

Special Business Requires Presence Of All Incumbent Officers, Says President

A special meeting of the Placerville Ski Club has been called for Thursday evening of next week at the P. G. & E. Company hall.

According to Robert Carpenter, Jr., president of the club during the past two seasons, there will be special business before the meeting which requires the presence of all officers of the club, and they are being asked to make special plans to be there.

While the exact nature of the business was not stated, it was understood that whatever is done will be in support of a move to wind up business of the past season and clear the way for the newly elected officers.

The officers for the new season, who ordinarily would take office in September, are headed by Reuel V. Whigam, as president.

The committee of the Placerville Girl Scout troop reports that members of the troop are very appreciative in the public interest demonstrated in the work of the organization.

A few weeks ago, the committee after considering various plans for assisting in financing the work of the troop, including that of sending members to the annual camp, addressed letters to various county residents inviting their financial support of the troop's work.

A particular effort was made by the committee to send letters to all who might be interested in assisting the troop. However, through no fault of the committee, there were some who might wish to assist the Girl Scouts who did not receive letters.

The committee states that any who may wish to share in the work may address their checks or other contributions to Placerville Girl Scouts, Troop One, Placerville.

Supervisors Acquire Fairgrounds Land

The Board of Supervisors this week voted to acquire from El Dorado Post No. 119, American Legion, one and sixty-four hundredths acres of land adjoining the county fair grounds, which is used in connection with auto parking.

BOOZE SALE TO MINOR, CHARGE

Snowline Camp Enrollee, Held For Rape, Reports Purchase Of Liquor

Angelo Lera, of the Bank Cafe, was arrested Thursday night and lodged in the county jail on a charge of selling liquor to minors in violation of Section 61 of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Act.

Friday morning he was released on $1,000 bail supplied by R. Lera and John A. Raffetto, Sr., to appear for a hearing in the court of Justice of the Peace T. F. Lewis on Thursday, May 16th.

Lera's arrest came as a development in an investigation by city and county officials in connection with the arrest of Frank Siffritt, 17, of Snowline CCC camp, on charge of rape.

Siffritt is reported to have told county officials that he was under the influence of liquor at the time of the alleged crime and when he said he had obtained the liquor at the Bank Cafe, Sheriff George M. Smith and District Attorney Henry S. Lyon called in Chief of Police Ralph Jones to join with them in working out the case.

After Siffritt had repeated his story of purchasing liquor at the Bank Cafe, Jones handed him one dollar and asked him to prove that he could buy liquor at that place.

The youth returned with a bottle of liquor which he said he had bought at the Bank Cafe and Lera was immediately taken into custody.

The statutory charge will probably be reviewed in the juvenile court, it was indicated on Friday.

Stating that he had learned that the defendant on the liquor charge, and his associates, had made inquiry as to the identity of the juvenile who claimed to have made the liquor purchase, District Attorney Lyon Friday morning warned Lera in the presence of witnesses that Siffritt is a state's witness and that efforts to influence his testimony will mean "more trouble than you are in now."

GOLFERS HAVE BUSINESS MEETING TONIGHT AT COURTHOUSE

U. S. FLEET'S SHIFT DENIED

President Says He Is Personally In Sympathy With Holland's View

WASHINGTON — (UP) — Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, said today that rumors the U. S. battle fleet would leave Hawaii for the Philippines were "manufactured out of thin air."

"There is just no change in the plans for the fleet," Stark told reporters after conferring with the president.

President Roosevelt said that he personally was in full sympathy with the views of Queen Wilhelmina in her proclamation rallying Holland to fight the German invasion. At the same time the president declared in a press conference that he saw no change in the situation to warrant revision of his belief that this country can stay out of war.

He said he would not go into detail on that subject because it was speculative. He warned reporters not to interpret the word "speculative" under any conditions to mean that this country may become involved in the European struggle.

The president indicated that he is not yet ready to proclaim that a state of war exists between Germany and the low countries, thereby invoking full force of the neutrality laws.

Mr. Roosevelt's press conference was held shortly after he had conferred with state, justice, navy and army officials for 35 minutes on new problems of American neutrality.

He did not disclose any details of that meeting.

Pleas Divided In Gold Case

One Defendant Admits Guilt; His Brother Held In $1,000 Bail

Roy Keefer, 32, and his brother, Ernest, 24, went different ways Friday morning when Sheriff George M. Smith and Inspector John Bongard, of the state division of Mines, arraigned them before Justice of the Peace T. F. Lewis on charges of falsifying affidavits in the sale of gold.

The former entered a plea that he is guilty and was sentenced by Justice of the Peace Lewis to serve thirty days in the county jail and, in addition, pay a fine of $100.

Ernest Keefer, whom officials said faces four charges, all misdemeanors, entered a plea that he is not guilty and trial of the matter was set down for Monday, May 13th, at ten o'clock in the morning, the defendant being remanded in lieu of bail set at $1,000.

TULIP BEDS REVEAL ARTILLERY AS HOLLAND FIGHTS INVASION

Hay Stacks Turn Into Pill Boxes For Troops Taking Up Defense Positions Against Air Blitzkrieg By Germany

By GRATTAN P. MCGROARTY United Press Staff Correspondent

LEYDEN, The Netherlands, (UP)—I saw an air blitzkrieg raging today over Holland where miles of tulip fields blazed in spring glory.

Over the flat countryside rolled clouds of dense black smoke from objectives hit in the German bombardments. Overhead was the whining roar of British, Dutch and German planes in combat and the sputtering chatter of their machine guns.

I roved all night and today in the country around Amsterdam, The Hague, Rotterdam and Leyden. At some points the military commanders kept me from getting close to the scene of action.

I got a hint from one Dutch officer near Rotterdam that the Germans had struck that port—Holland's greatest—a smashing blow. "I can't tell you military secrets but I hate to think about the situation is at Rotterdam," this officer said.

Near Leyden I saw heavy clouds of black smoke rising. The Dutch military would not let me approach the scene but it was evident that some great fire, probably started by German bombs, was raging.

The Dutch commanders were calm and untroubled despite the constant roar of planes overhead. The Germans were being engaged in constant dog fights both by the British and Dutch planes. The Germans were attempting to machine-gun concentrations of Dutch troops.

NEW YORK, (UP)—Perhaps the only iconoclast in America who wears knickers is Gene Sarazen.

Perhaps the only man in America who wears knickers is Gene Sarazen.

Be that as it may. If the "Little Sardine," as he is affectionately known, could knock the golf ball as effectively as he does so many aspects of the golf game he would have won even more championships than he has.

The man who has criticized the size of the cups, the construction of the ball, and the shape and size of the sticks, now has fresh grievance.

Appropriately enough, Sarazen's fresh grievance was revealed at the Fresh Meadow Club a day or two ago as he practices for the Goodall Tournament in a friendly round with newspapermen. Bluntly put, and he never was one to couch his

IN MEMORIAM

In sweet memory of our husband, father and grandfather, who passed away one year ago:

"Behold the western evening light! It melts in deepening gloom; So calmly Christians sink away, Descending to the tomb."

"The winds breathe low; the yellow leaf Scarce whispers from the tree; So gently flows the parting breath, When good men cease to be."

"How beautiful on all the hills The crimson light is shed; 'Tis like the peace the Christian gives To mourners round his bed."

"How mildly on the wand'ring cloud The sunset beam is cast! So sweet the memory left behind When loved ones breathe their last!"

"And lo, above the dew of night The vesper star appears; So faith lights up the mourner's heart, Whose eyes are dim with tears."

"Night falls, but soon the morning light His glories shall restore; And thus the eyes that sleep in death Shall wake to close no more."

MRS. R. P. CORNELISON.

"In that way," Sarazen said, "the operators of the courses would know what to expect. They would have ample time to get and keep the courses in shape. As it is now, inferior courses often get the open and amateur tournaments and the men who run them have to resort to tricky means to make them difficult and unfair."

There is sense to what Sarazen says, don't you think?

views in the language of diplomacy, Sarazen wants the United States Golf Association to stop holding the open championship on courses unfit for the No. 1 event in golf.

"What the U. S. G. A. does now," said the little fellow who has held most of the world's major titles, "is to put the open on the auction block each year. The tournament goes to the highest bidder, no matter what the course is like. I tell you I have played in opens that were held over courses that were scarcely fit for a ladies' flag tournament. When golfers play for the biggest title of them all they deserve a course that exacts the best in shot making."

Never a man to point out an ill without offering a cure, Sarazen had this to suggest to the U. S. G. A.

"Let them follow the example of the British," he said, "and choose six great courses and name them as the permanent sites of the open. The British don't play their open on any and every course. It is always on St. Andrews or Sandwich or Prestwick or equal courses. The U. S. G. A. may argue that it has to award the open to various parts of the country, but that would be alright too. I won't try to name the six best courses in the country, but I will name you some the boys could choose from. On the coast, the Los Angeles Country Club and the San Francisco Country Club. In the Midwest, Interlachen at Minneapolis and Olympic Fields in Chicago. Here in the east, Brookline at Boston, Fresh Meadows and Garden City near New York, and Merion in Philadelphia. In the south, the Masters at Augusta and the No. 2 layout at Pinehurst. And I almost forgot the best one of them all, Oakmont in Pittsburgh."

Gene believes it would be a swell idea to alternate the open, the amateur, and the women's national between six courses chosen from such a group of fine courses. And, when the war is over, play the Ryder and Walker cup matches on them, too, which would give each of them a tournament a year.

"In that way," Sarazen said, "the operators of the courses would know what to expect. They would have ample time to get and keep the courses in shape. As it is now, inferior courses often get the open and amateur tournaments and the men who run them have to resort to tricky means to make them difficult and unfair."

There is sense to what Sarazen says, don't you think?

CRIMSON WARNING

by RICHARD SALE
© 1936 by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Jane Hall, girl detective, is summoned to the home of Emery Harding on Skeleton Island, off the coast of Maine, to guard his daughter Audrey, whose life has been threatened in a letter, typewritten in red, demanding that Harding relinquish a valuable ruby he bought from an old sea captain, Albert Santrey. He also sends for his friend, Bruce Kirby, young museum curator.

Shortly afterward, Santrey is murdered on the beach—then Drumm, one of the servants. The house is full of guests, any one of whom might have committed the murders. When Harding takes Jane and Kirby up to his room to see the ruby, they surprise an intruder who escapes in the dark. They find another threatening letter, also a cuff link marked "C."

They go to Robert Castian's room and examine his typewriter. It is the machine, says Kirby, that wrote the threatening letters.

"H'E's stalling, Bruce," said Jane calmly.

She moved toward Castian, who unconsciously stepped back.

"Look here!" he cried. "I don't know what you're talking about! His eyes darted from face to face. 'I've done nothing!'"

"You deny striking me? Being in Harding's room?" said Kirby. "Yes!"

"Don't be an ass, Castian! We have got the goods on you. You put that letter in the room to intimidate!"

"Letter?" Castian broke in wildly. "I know nothing about a letter! I went to Emery's room after the—"

He stopped, a look of terror sweeping his face.

"You went after the ruby?" Kirby asked. "Is that what you were going to say?"

"You were there then?" cried Harding. "I had still hoped we were wrong!"

"You're under arrest," said Jane evenly, approaching Castian. "And don't pull any tricks."

"Don't put your hands on me. Any one of you!" Castian shrieked. "You have nothing on me! You can't rest me!"

"I have arrested you," remarked Jane. "And don't try to get out that door, Mr. Castian."

HER hand dove into her handbag and came out gripping a small revolver, which she leveled at him.

"So you still carry that .22 caliber popgun?" Kirby smiled. "Popgun it may be. But it will stop a man."

"I don't doubt it," Kirby said good-naturedly. "But there's no sense in frightening your catch to death. He'll faint if you don't turn that muzzle away from him."

Provoked as she was by Kirby's bantering tone, Jane had to admit that Castian was a clever man.

All the fight had gone out of her and as he cowered c the ominous little blade the revolver, he looked at Jane's brow wrinkled. She saw the gun back in her bag and drew a deep breath.

"Sit down, Mr. Castian," she said.

Castian, pallid, groped for a chair and slid into it, his dark eyes ranging swiftly over them but never focusing for more than a second on any one of them.

"And now," advised Kirby, "explain yourself before Miss Hall is prompted to display her meador again. Why did you go to Emery's room?"

"SHOP AROUND THE CORNER" CLOSES AT EMPIRE SATURDAY NIGHT

The week-end program at the Empire Theater opens Friday with
"The Shop Around the Corner"
which closes on Saturday night to make way for "Little Old New York," which will be shown on Sunday and Monday.
"The Shop Around the Corner"
co-stars Margaret Sullivan and James Stewart in a story of a little shop in Budapest which is directed by Ernst Lubitsch and is reported as having a distinctive "Grand Hotel flavor."

"Little Old New York," with Alice Faye and Fred MacMurray is a lusty, red-blooded tale of the early
New York waterfront and the construction of the first steamboat, the "Clermont," in 1807. MacMurray's job is to bring the unusual vessel into being from the specifications set by Richard Greene, who plays Robert Fulton.

IRISH CREEK MINING FIRM HANDLING 1,500 YARDS BY DREDGE DAILY

Approximately 1500 yards of gravel is being handled daily by the dredge of the Irish Creek Mining Company operating near Kelsey,
says a Sacramento report.

A. D. Hadsel, of Auburn, manager of the company, states although no general cleanup has been made since the dredge started early this month, the preliminary cleanups
have been satisfactory.

Hadsel said that the company has at least three years of operation ahead in Irish and Cincinnati Creeks. About 1200 acres comprising properties belonging to Geo.
Croft, Harry Vande Water, the Morgan Mining Company and Dudley and Guy Davenport are held under lease.

Three shifts of men are employed in the operation of the dredge,
the gasoline shovel and in general clearing of debris and brush.

Under the system used the sands are classified out and piled with the large waste material, thereby putting no silt in the stream. Water for the operation of the dredge is purchased from the Georgetown Divide Water Company.

The material, a portion of which was worked in the early days, is scooped up by a gasoline shovel and dumped into a hopper. It is then carried to the plant where it is treated by means of a trommel jig, sluice boxes and an amalgamation plate. The waste material is carried away by a conveyor belt and stacked.

Hadsel, designer, and in charge of construction and operation of the unit, is also the inventor of the Hadsel mill used in some parts of the United States, in Canada and in the Philippines.

With his partners, C. F. Fisk, of Alameda, E. J. Harp and Elmer
Von Glahn of Corcoran and John W. Marshbank of Daly City, he also operates the Monarch mine at the Butcher Ranch near Foresthill in Placer county. A 100 ton cyanide plant is now on this property, which Hadsel says has a potential 20-000,000 tons of ore. With the opening of the property this year the partners are contemplating the construction of a 500 ton plant.

THE Book Mark

By JANE VOILES

We have never seen a more handsome display of "Garden" books than this season. It must be the garden tours and garden shows of recent years that have made us all so garden-conscious. We have already had something to say about Julian Meade's "Bouquets and Bitters." It is one of the most original of the many fine garden books, full of anecdotes, informal, chatty remarks and invaluable information
for the gardener, amateur or professional.

Mr. Meade listens to a controversy on the pronunciation of that word that is forever causing disputation among gardeners: Gladioli.
One member of the party pronounced it "glad-DIE-oh," another "gladi-O-li" and still another who belonged to the socially elite called it—
"GLAD-ya-li."

Tribute is paid to all kinds of rare flowers in Mr. Meade's book but he doesn't forget the tough, little perennials that lend life and color to thousands of gardens. For example, he reminds the reader of that little poem that Christopher Morley quoted on Black-eyed Sus-
ans:

"I used to love my garden
But now my love is dead.
I found a Bachelor's Button
In Black-eyed Susan's bed."

We can't resist quoting this bit of doggerel with its sound advice:
"Early to bed
Early to rise
Work like hell
And fertilize!"

Mr. Meade has the courage to express his opinion of the excesses to which over-doses of flower arrangement are bringing us. He quotes his friend "who is scared to death to have a vase of flowers in sight" when her friends come in because they are far more interested in seeing if the flowers are one and a half the height of the container than in seeing the flowers themselves. As for the miniature arrangements, they are hangovers
from playhouse days.

Gardens from all over the country get into the book. An account of the Cottage Herb Garden at the National Cathedral in Washington will convert many a non-interested party into an herbalist. One might start with the scented-leaf geraniums: rose, skeleton-leaf, nutmeg, lemon, Lady Mary, and apple

or the simpler mints: lemon, curly,
creeping, apple, peppermint, spear-
mint, pennyroyal.

If you are at all curious about the favorite flowers of First Ladies you will learn that Eleanor Roosevelt is particularly fond of yellow roses and that Mrs. Hoover liked Canterbury bells. The first Mrs. Wilson liked a simple garden that was neither complicated nor ornate. Mrs.
Taft had a tall privet hedge planted around the grounds so she could enjoy her walks in privacy. Mrs.
Coolidge who liked to arrange her own flowers always kept a vase of fresh flowers in front of the photograph of her dead son.

You will enjoy Mr. Meade's stories of the Hollywood gardens.
To be sure, he found Norma Shearer more attractive than her garden, but we must remember that Mr. Meade is a young man and susceptible to beauty wherever he finds it. When he heard that Joan Bennett wanted him to see her garden he was skeptical and said he was sure she didn't know a bulb from an onion. But when she asked for directions for making a compost pile, that was a horse of a different color. And these are the directions: mix everything from wilted lettuce to a faded corsage into the compost pile, sprinkle with lime and wait for decay to give the best fertilizers.

Harold Lloyd's three million dollar estate, Green Acres, revealed one enchanting garden after another. Bette Davis is the possessor of a handsome jacaranda tree.
Jeannette Macdonald favors honeysuckle arbors and Myrna Loy tends her own herb garden.

In San Francisco, Mr. Meade visited the Podesta & Baldocchi shop paying it a just tribute. Our California begonias gave him the greatest thrill he received in the state.
These are just the merest skimmings of the delights the book offers. If your garden consists of a window box or three acres, you will find help and entertainment in
"Bouquets and Bitters."

No Pleasing Dries or Wets

GREAT FALLS, Mont. (UP)—When
the city council limited beer licenses to one for every 750 population and retail liquor licenses to one for every 1,500 persons, its action was received two ways. Supporters said it would prevent the growth of police and social problems. Opponents insisted it created a monopoly.
